The objectives of the present study were to assess the effect of different extender and cryoprotectant concentrations on the post-thaw motility parameters, physicochemical parameters, and fertilizability of buffalo epididymal sperm. A total of 60 buffalo epididymal spermatozoa were diluted in a Tris-based extender containing egg yolk and frozen in 0.5 mL straws at -80°C. Thawing was carried out in the water bath at 37°C for 10 s. A similar number of spermatozoa in the control group was diluted in the Tris-based extender without cryoprotectant. Freezing in straws appeared to be an effective technique for cryopreserving epididymal buffalo spermatozoa. The addition of 0.3% dimethyl sulfoxide (DMSO) to the extender significantly improved the motility parameters and post-thaw viability and decreased the plasma membrane integrity. Similarly, the addition of 3% egg yolk to the Tris-based extender improved post-thaw motility parameters, viability, and plasma membrane integrity. None of the testicular spermatozoa extended in Tris-based extender had post-thaw 570a42141b
