Scuba Kartz! - 03/29/2012 Today we take a break from the water to play a game of Scuba Kartz! What's the deal with that? If you don't know, check out the thread. There is a story behind this play, which will be fully revealed at the end of this episode of the show. There's also some good news! Rockapella is still working on their next album, but it's a real live album this time and it sounds awesome. Also, a special guest makes her debut!Q: Redefine Java class with eclipse I have redefined a java class, but when I am compiling the code, my defind functions are not called. I got the following errors. No enclosing instance of type BlackJack is accessible, Must qualify the allocation with an enclosing instance of type BlackJack (e.g. x.new A() where x is an instance of BlackJack). What's New In Adobe Photoshop?

Q: Trouble with array value looping in php First, I know that there are other similar questions but I have been over those for hours and the solutions don't work. I am trying to create a program that will calculate the average or sum of the numbers that are inputted by the user. I'm not sure if it's worth it to say that I have tried every way to get this to work and it just doesn't. I know that there are alot of ways to calculate averages. I have just included a simplified program. $number = array(); $number_dec = array($number); while($number_dec) { $number_dec = str_replace(" ", $number_dec); $number_dec = str_replace(";", $number_dec); $number_dec = str_replace("&", $number_dec); $number_dec = str_replace("&#", $number_dec); $number_dec = str_replace("&#", $number_dec); $number_dec = str_replace("&#", $number_dec); } $average = $number_dec/10; For the above, it will only take the first number input and will ONLY go through the first 'for' loop which is rather frustrating. Any suggestions? A: Make sure that the first value is the average of the entire array. If it's a single value for the entire array, the average will be that number. Q: Deleting a directory in a network drive using C# I am trying to delete a directory in a network drive using c#. I am successful in deleting the directory but I am getting a exception
